

Guidelines for volunteers' access to the Guild's premises

Purpose

The access rules govern which volunteers have access to what.

The guild has a number of spaces that are lockable with so-called salto-, trac- or ordinary padlocks. Salto and trac locks are locks that you open with your LU card, while padlocks require a key. The main difference between the salto and trac locks is that the former is not connected to a database but requires a manual loading of the card to be used. Salto can also not be time-limited and requires manual handling while timelox can do this.

The Head of Facilities manages salto and padlock accesses as well as safe keys, the President manages trac for the section.

The purpose of restricting access to the guild's premises is to

- limit the risk of theft and vandalism.
- limit the risk of unauthorized use of guild equipment.
- limit the risk of obstructing or disrupting the daily operations of the guild and in the building.

Although this guideline has been in place for some time, officials' access to some Section premises has been abused. The Section has had its access to the Embassy withdrawn following previous misuse of access, causing enormous problems for its operations. It is strictly forbidden to stay in premises other than the Section's meeting and recreation rooms for a longer period of time or for the purpose of socializing. Storage areas may only be used for storage, as storage areas are not searched in the event of the building being evacuated. This applies in particular to the Embassy (bunker).

Rules

- If the volunteer misuses access to the guild's facilities, access may be revoked.
- The person who admits someone into a room, to which the person admitted does not have access, is responsible for ensuring that the room and the materials in the room are not misused.
